Creative Thoughts You Can Use

Raising Awareness

Before implementing a program that will raise energy awareness within your organization, you need to understand the opportunities and tools that are available to you. This is critical to establishing realistic and workable goals and objectives for your particular situation. Your team needs to understand practices that may affect energy behaviors such as open doorways, leaving lights and computers on or finding air and water leaks. We have a variety of products and solutions to help reinforce these ideas or we can create a program for you.
