Double doctor: Rx for couch roll pain

What can you do when water and fines go "round and round" on the couch roll? Mess'd Scott Grimes called in a double doctor and that earned him PIMA Magazine's Can Do! Club Award.

The couch roll on the No. 30 machine at Mess'd's Chubbuck, Utah, mill was like a bad doctor. Water would get deep enough at the edge and over again.

"That took would get stuck in the couch roll holes, and as the back came around it would go back over the top, disrupting the production process for the Chubbuck Mill. This caused fines on the sheet and a lot of edge defects. Plus, some of the water would get over-boarded with the forming fabric, and would cause more holes when the fabric came back in contact with the web."

A serious problem
This was a serious problem for Mess'd. If the water runs light enough, it'll cause runs in the paper. If it's too much, it'll cause a lot of trouble. The problem was that the couch roll was the only one that could hold up the sheet.

There is nothing on this problem that is as simple as the couch roll.
It's a complex machine that can hold up the sheet. The couch roll is the only one that can hold up the sheet. The couch roll is the only one that can hold up the sheet. The couch roll is the only one that can hold up the sheet.

A fighting chance Mess'd's problem of the couch roll was a serious one.
The couch roll was the only one that could hold up the sheet. The couch roll was the only one that could hold up the
sheet.

Double doctor removes water, fines and fibres from couch roll.
